Salem People Abroad.

Monrovia, Cal., Messenger, Aug. 4.

Miss Pearl Applegate and Miss Moore, of Salem, Oregon, both N. E. A. excursionists, were in Monrovia, Friday, to visit the former's cousin, Miss Nannie Applegate, but found that young lady had gone to Long Beach.

Boise, Idaho, Statesman, Aug. 9.

Charles R. Scott, of Salem, Or., has taken charge of the Friends church in Hyde park, having been induced by Mrs. Way to come here to relieve her of the work. The church is fully organized and has a Sunday school with 150 enrolled.

He's Here, Just the Same.

Through an oversight, one of the most popular of the young men and commissioned officers of the Second regiment was not mentioned in yesterday's notes on the home-coming of the volunteers. This was Lieutenant Chas. Murray, of Co. K. He is one of the few officers of that grade who have received flattering mention in the cablegrams from Manila. He had charge of a rapid-fire Hotchkiss gun, and did some terrible execution with it. No doubt the Philippines are about as glad he left the Philippines as his many friends are to see him safely home in Salem.

Ministrels Tomorrow.

The Georgia Minstrels will be seen in a program of fine minstrelsy at the Reed tomorrow evening. Many new features have been added since their last appearance here. The company consists of 25 all star colored performers and is an up-to-date organization. Bright crisp dialogue; funny sayings, catchy songs, cakewalks, and all the latest in two hours entertainment. Jack M. Oliver who is with the company, is one of the highest priced colored actors on the American stage. His original songs on our war with Spain will go down in history. Popular summer prices will prevail, 25 and 50 cents to all parts of the theater. There will be a big street parade and concert tomorrow at 2. Seats are selling rapidly.

Secretary Thielson, of the Chamber of Commerce, is preparing data as to tonnage of the Willamette Valley, which will be affected by the abolition of tolls, in case the government should purchase the canal and locks at Oregon City. He asks each merchant of Salem to assist him to the extent of furnishing approximately the number of tons of freight received by him per annum. It is not necessary to keep river and rail freight separate, since all will be alike affected if the tolls are abolished on the river.

STATE FAIR AND SALEM.

There were times when people commenced to come to the State Fair in June. Farmers would bring their wool down from Umpqua and Rogue River valleys; after disposing of it at Salem they would lay in their yearly supplies here, and then would camp near the Fair Grounds until after the Fair. The State Fair has also brought many noted men to Salem whose intention was only to see the Fair, but they found other attractions that induced them to locate here. As in the case of the writer (S. Friedman), came to attend the State Fair in the early sixties. He was so delighted with the surrounding country that he made Salem his permanent home. A great many others that have settled in business in Salem were first attracted here by the State Fair. It is therefore incumbent upon the majority of our citizens to make the State Fair a grand success, for the Fair has helped Salem. It is not expected for people to come and camp here for several months on account of it. Now it is no use for the hackmen to holler "All aboard for the Fair Ground," for the railroad has changed things. But yet the people who come for the Fair usually manage to get into the city, view the town, visit the Capitol and Penitentiary and not the Insane Asylum but the Oregon State Hospital, and they go to hear the Deaf Mutes talk to them at their school. Then they go to the Blind School so as to let the blind see them, and above all, they never forget to stop and see Friedman at Friedman's New Racket, corner Commercial and State St., where they lay in their supplies of Dry Goods and Clothing.
